"Handy Man" Tabooed.

"My husband is such a handy man around the house," I recently heard a wife remark with pride, says a writer in the April New Idea. She went on to tell how he could dry dishes when the maid was out, and even enjoyed getting a meal. It seems to me to be a popular fallacy among wives that a useful man about the house is the most desirable husband. I have noticed, however, and my observation on this point, owing to my interest in the subject, has been wide—that the men who do a maid's work are the ones who don't make enough money to pay an extra maid for it.

Business and the support of his family, is a man's work. Housekeeping and meeting domestic emergencies is a woman's and when the two overlap it is usually to the detriment of both.

I know a man who tried to economize by employing his wife as his stenographer, but he soon found himself so underfed and badly taken care of at home that he changed his tactics. In the same way a man who goes home tired and worried with business cares, cannot go back in the morning refreshed and renewed for the next day's campaign unless he finds recreation, rest and a reposeful atmosphere awaiting him. The better the home a wife makes her husband, the more money he is going to make for her to expend in lightening her household labor. If a wife is sick and the cook leaves and no one is to be had, any husband would be glad to get her breakfast and care for the house, and be none the worse for it. In the same way, any wife under similar circumstances would be glad to go to her husband's office, get his mail and send his telegrams; but one should be as much a matter of emergency as the other.

Hat Factory for Marshall.

The M. V. C. boys are both loyal and energetic when Marshall's reputation is at stake. Just when many were pulling their coat collars around their ears and trying to crawl away till after the financial crisis, the Seniors and Juniors have saved the day.

Mrs. Emma Olson invited these two classes to her handsome home for a reception one evening last week. The pastime was a hat trimming contest for the boys. There were about forty guests present. The factory got a good start and a big supply of spring millinery was turned out but so far they have been unable to secure competent salesmen to dispose of the bonnets at double price—which Marshall products should have on account of their superiority.

Rev. C. E. Petersen's hats deserve special mention, as we are told they could walk, being diked in toggery of ostrich plumes, chiffon and colored roses of different kinds. The girl that captures Peterson and his bonnets is in luck.

Bourne Mitchell trimmed the most stylish spring hat—it could only be described in Latin, and as we don't inflict such punishment upon our readers we will simply say it was "ad gustum."

A new way of selecting partners for refreshments was adopted. A lot of hearts were hung up in a row with the boys' names written upon them and the girls with bows shot arrows at those hearts. It is said the girls hesitated a little on account of the uncertainty of this way and more than one boy received "his invitation direct," although no one was seriously hurt.

Panama, Paradise of Cupid.

New York, March 13.—Panama is one place where Leap year is not needed. Miss Helen Varick Boswell, who organized Women's clubs on the Isthmus at the instance of the government, told the members of the Portia club to day.

"Cupid is tremendously overworked down there," said Miss Boswell. "It is impossible to keep a woman single. At one of the hospitals they told me they had lost seventeen nurses, and very plain ones must be sent. The nurses became engaged to the men returning to Panama on the way down on the steamer."

"Everything is provided for the married quarters, houses, furniture and drinking water, and there is nothing to get except food and clothing. A wife is a very comfortable adjunct to a man's life, and the bachelor quarters are being constantly depleted. A man in Panama gets about twice the money that he would here for the same work, and there is no way to spend money."

I believe that is one reason it has been hard for the woman to remain single. It is a very good place to save."
